PORTIA WASN'T GOOD LAWYER IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Senator Bailey Scoffs Pound o' Flesh Point of Shakespeare Heroine

DEFENDS PROFESSION

"Mustn't Criticise Courts," He Says, Then Criticises Ad Lib

DEFENSE of the lawyer's profession, of the legal institution and the supreme court in the United States represented the duties of an attorney attorney before the Oklahoma Bar association in the quiet room of the Salvo's Hotel, Wichita, Kansas, by Joseph Weldon Bailey, attorney representative of the state of Kansas in the United States Senate. Senator George S. Ramsey of Muskogee introduced the distinguished guest, who said that during his day Daniel Webster was generally regarded as the greatest constitutional lawyer in the United States, and he regarded Ex-Senator Bailey as the greatest constitutional lawyer in the United States at the present time.

As the great Texan whose life was glorified with a galaxy of applause continued for a full minute:

After reference to the fact that many persons in the audience were his neighbors from the state of Texas and a number of them his personal friends, and that he felt more inclined to minimize than to defend a formal defense, he said:

"I realize that I must yield to these emotions and, addressing them, I shall speak to you about lawyers and the courts. Threadbare though the subject may be, it can better be anticipated where lawyers are assembled in their annual convulsions, and it seems to be especially appropriate in these days when so-called demagogues are striving to incite a prejudice against all lawyers and plotting to destroy the public confidence in all courts."

He differed from those who call a lawyer a "baiter," basing their opinion in "The Merchant of Venice," bating the pound of flesh:

"Shylock's proclamation that he will take the pound of flesh, but that if in doing so one drop of Christian blood was shed, his hands should become forfeit to the state of Venice. He didn't believe she got it from the 'Learned Doctors of the law,' for if the Jew had a right to take the pound of flesh, he had a right to take whatever went with it. He admitted the Jew's firm stand in refusing anything save that which was 'baited in the bond.' Shylock craved the law."

"I differ from those who call a lawyer a 'baiter,' basing their opinion in "The Merchant of Venice," bating the pound of flesh:

"Shylock's proclamation that he will take the pound of flesh, but that if in doing so one drop of Christian blood was shed, his hands should become forfeit to the state of Venice. He didn't believe she got it from the 'Learned Doctors of the law,' for if the Jew had a right to take the pound of flesh, he had a right to take whatever went with it. He admitted the Jew's firm stand in refusing anything save that which was 'baited in the bond.'

He said that in the play he received no little consternation from the public as to what they do to the bar, they would soon be driven from the profession which they now observe. He said the people who most earnestly and continuously abuse lawyers are divided into four classes—ignorant people, those who can hardly be described as ignorant but not intelligent enough to fully appreciate the lawyer's relation to society under a government like ours, and who complain because lawyers take cases without regard to the justice of them, persons who have been the victims of dishonest lawyers and rashly conclude that all lawyers are dishonest, and the scoundrels who consider lawyers as their natural enemies and regard all law as undue abridgment of their liberty.

He said, in substance, that there were no more black-sheep in the legal profession than might be found among bankers, merchants, farmers and even ministers.

Constitutional Rights

Some persons were opposed to lawyers on the ground that, according to the Bible, a man can not serve two masters. The senator said such men had not read the sixth chapter of St. Matthew understandingly. It was not written for today. In the sermon on the mount occurs the injunction to take no care as to what we shall eat. He said there was not a man in the country who dared live up to that exhortation. He would be arrested. If the Lord was left to feed one's children today, the courts would take charge of them.

Discussing the courts, Senator Bailey said in part: "You all know the extent to which this propaganda against the courts has been conducted. They know that if once they can breed suspicion in the minds of the American people relative to the courts it will be easy to undermine our whole system of government. Take it to your own home and become. If you once become convinced Justice is for sale, your patriotism likewise is for sale. The lawyer with confidence in the courts ought to support his license and refuse to practice if you believe the opposite you ought to help bring these deluded and misguided citizens to a better realization of the duties of citizenship. The future of our country in this respect depends upon the American bar."

Upon the conclusion of the address Attorney General S. P. Freeling mentioned Senator Bailey as an honorary member of the Oklahoma Bar association and he was elected by acclamation.

Fathers Were Wise

"It has been so long since the people of this country have experienced a governmental tyranny that we are apt to think it may never come again," said the speaker, "but if you will just familiarize your mind with some of the things that are even now transpiring in some of the federal courts, you will find that your fathers were right in forbidding the System Against Winter Cold.

Many users of GROVES' TASTELESS CHILL TONIC make it a practice to take a number of bottles in the fall to strengthen and fortify the system against the cold weather during the winter. Everyone knows the tonic of Quinine and Iron which this preparation contains in a tasteless and acceptable form. It purifies and enriches the blood and builds up the whole system, 50c.
